Your financial support will ensure that the front-line professionals who work every day to preserve the rights of our most vulnerable populations are able participate, share, and learn the tools for success, regardless of their ability to pay.

Now in its 11th year, the Fair Housing + Civil Rights Conference remains true to the original mission: to ensure that those working in the field have a professional development opportunity to stay current on the pressing issues and challenges facing their communities. Offered free-of-charge for attendees, the workshops and plenary sessions also cover leadership competencies, legal updates, and professional development opportunities vital to the success of current and future drivers of change. Attendees return to their jobs reinvigorated and ready to share new ideas and strategies with co-workers and in their communities.
